Podcast Interviews

I host the podcast channel New Books in East Asian Studies \(NBEAS\) and I co-host New Books in Science, Technology, and Society \(NBSTS\). I also occasionally do guest interviews for some of the other New Books Network Channels. You can find them linked from this list \(http://carlanappi.com/new-books-network-interviews/\) which I try to update regularly.

As of 03 September 2016, I had conducted a total of 347 interviews: 197 interviews as host of NBEAS, 132 interviews for NBSTS, and 18 interviews for other NBN channels, including the New Books Network Seminar, New Books in History, and New Books in Literary Studies. [May 2018 note: I have been on a yearlong hiatus from podcasting while I complete a handful of other projects and move to a new position.]

Language Proficiency

Because my current research involves the study of multilingual dictionaries and other documents related to the reading and translation of foreign scripts in China, I spend a significant amount of time devoted to language study. I aim for different levels of expertise depending on the intended use of the language in my work.

Spoken fluency in: Mandarin Chinese (advanced), Arabic (MSA and colloquial Levantine, intermediate)

Reading knowledge of: Chinese (Classical & modern Mandarin, advanced), Spanish (intermediate), French (intermediate), German (intermediate), Arabic (Modern Standard and Classical, intermediate), Manchu (advanced), Mongolian (Classical, intermediate), Tibetan (Classical, intermediate), Russian (introductory)
